BOARD OF ELECTION COMMISSIONERS FOR THE CITY OF CHICAGO EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

POSITION SPECIFICATIONS

CLIENT

The Board of Election Commissioners for the City of Chicago (the “Board”) was born out of a time in the late 1880’s when election reform movements were sweeping through major urban centers across the country. The reforms focused on keeping elected officials from having control over the electoral franchise and placing election management and administration under independent election professionals. In the 1880’s in Chicago, civic leaders led the campaign for these reforms. Among the leaders of the electoral-reform movement was Chicago Tribune Editor-in-Chief Joseph Medill, who also had served as the mayor of the City immediately after the Chicago Fire.

The most common election reform model involved the creation of an independent Board of Election Commissioners, whose members could neither be elected officials nor participate in political campaigns. Under this system of election administration, a Board of Election Commissioners may serve as an extension of the Judicial Branch of the government – the same branch of government also involved in deciding other election matters, such as whether candidates qualify for the ballot and post-election recounts.

At the urging of civic leaders, Illinois lawmakers in the State Capital, Springfield, approved a law in 1885 that gave the voters in any Illinois municipality the power to form a local Board of Election Commissioners. As the City of Chicago was comprised of townships, separate referenda were conducted in each township. Overwhelming majorities of voters in every Chicago township voted to create one Board of Election Commissioners for the entire City.

The three members of the Board of Election Commissioners for the City of Chicago are appointed by the Cook County Circuit Court to three-year terms. In a three-year cycle, one Commissioner’s term expires each year. By law, the Board membership must include at least one member from each of the State’s two leading political parties. Based upon ballots cast in primary elections, those parties are the Democratic and Republican parties. A prospective Commissioner's political affiliation is determined by his or her record for selecting ballots at Primary Elections.

The Board of Election Commissioners for the City of Chicago sets policies for the agency and manages the activities of the Executive Director related to voter registration programs and election management, equipment, budgeting, purchasing and human resources. Serving also as the Electoral Board, the Commissioners also decide matters related to which candidates qualify for the ballot for all City offices. The Electoral Board also determines ballot access in state legislative and Congressional districts that are entirely within Cook County if any portion of the districts are in Chicago. Electoral Board decisions can be appealed in the court system.

In most years, the Board administers two city-wide elections. Oversight includes one of the largest election operations in the United States with approximately 1.5 million registered voters in 2,069 precincts, more precincts than in the entire State of Iowa.

The Board staff of approximately 130 full-time employees maintain the records, program equipment and make preparations throughout the years. Central to the Board activities are year-round preparations so that the agency can train and deploy 15,000 temporary poll workers to serve in the polling places on Election Day and report election results after the polls close. Under the direction of the Board and its Executive Director, the full-time staff oversee: the management of voter registration systems; mapping systems for precincts and districts; preparation of the ballots; designation and renting of polling places; hiring and training of judges of elections, poll workers and investigators; management of the warehouse, programming, testing and shipping of election equipment to and from the polling places; and reporting, canvassing and archiving all election results and related data from each election.

The Board of Election Commissioners for the City of Chicago is funded by the City of Chicago and Cook County. The Board maintains offices in downtown Chicago and a separate warehouse location.
